

Parallels between the Creation and Flood Stories in Genesis

The story of Noah and the Flood occupies a very important place in the book of Genesis, a dividing line between the time of Adam/Eve and the time of the Patriarchs. The Flood story demonstrates God’s grace in providing for humanity despite the corruption of God’s original cosmic design. In this sense, the Flood story is a parallel to the creation story where God graciously provided for Adam and Eve after the Fall. While Genesis 1-2 focuses on God organizing the functions of the world, the Flood story is the re-creation of the world to “reset” the divinely created order. This perspective is a major interpretive lens for the Flood story. Here are some other ways in which Noah’s story references the original creation in Genesis 1-2.

* This is based on using the lunar calendar (364 days per year) such as is found in ancient texts like the Book of Jubilees (2nd c. BCE). In a lunar calendar, each special day, such as New Years, falls on the same day of the week each year. Thus, the religious feasts would be observed at the same time, on the same day each year. This does assume that Genesis is aware of a lunar calendar schedule. The focus on dates in the Flood story indicates an awareness of such calendar issues.
